Dog parks are a great benefit to any community!

The ability to exercise off-leash, in a designated and safe environment can contribute to the health and well-being of dogs in a significant way. Most dogs require the kind of exercise and movement that they just can't get on the end of a leash. Off-leash they are able to run, fetch, and play to their heart's content.

When properly monitored, dog parks can also act as a way for dogs to socialize in neutral territory. Whether learning to engage one-on-one, meet new dogs and people, share or play - a well supervised interaction is invaluable to a dog's socialization.

Dog parks can be equally beneficial to the dog owners and the community as a whole, acting as a social center for people who share common interests. People swap training and health advice, and compare tips on everything from dog-friendly destinations to vet recommendations.

Dog parks are a hub of social and physical activity for both dogs and people.
